SEER

(INTP, Balzac, ILI)

Reads how a situation will turn out before anyone asks, then waits for the right moment.

98.7%

RELIABILITY

Why you can trust this

The type was found two independent ways, and they agree. Each dichotomy on its own is heard at 90–95%; the functions are heard less often, but they name a specific way of thinking, not just a side. When four dichotomies and two strong functions point to the same type, an error is all but ruled out.

4 dichotomies → Seer + leading and creative → Seer = a match

The Seer's eight functions

- LEADING Temporal Intuition — heard 8 times
- CREATIVE Practical Logic — heard 6 times
- MOBILIZING Relational Ethics
- SUGGESTIVE Volitional Sensing
- DEMONSTRATIVE Structural Logic
- IGNORING Intuition of Possibilities
- ROLE Experiential Sensing
- VULNERABLE Ethics of Emotions

Leading: Temporal Intuition

A feel for a situation's stage and where it's heading, held as one line of time. What's spent and what's about to turn shows up early.

Creative: Practical Logic

Whether something works, and the proof that it does. Nothing leaves their hands without one more careful pass.

The narrowest lens: Ethics of Emotions. Feelings as they show on the outside: mood, tone, the atmosphere in a room. It doesn't sound in the Seer's speech, and that's how the type is built, not a flaw of character. What to do with it is covered in the profile.

Your quadra: Gamma

Four types that value the same things. The easiest to agree with, even when the people are nothing alike.

- Seer — you
- Duke — dual relations
- Executor — mirror relations
- Custodian — activation relations

Your people

Dual relations: Duke

The type the Seer finds easiest: their strong functions cover your narrow ones. How that looks in real life: the Duke chapter in the relationship guide.

Conflict relations: Beacon

The type that's hardest to be around, and usually nobody's fault. Why that is and what helps: the Beacon chapter in the guide.
